Colwill Engineering is pleased to have been part of the design and construction team for a new 57,000 square foot headquarters and manufacturing facility for MicroLumen, Inc.; the international leader in the manufacture of high performance medical tubing.

The facility is truly world class in every respect, ranging from the high technology manufacturing operations, to the building operating systems, to an office environment that is sure to garner several awards. Employee amenities include a fitness center with club style locker rooms as well as an on site café and training center.

We are very proud to have been selected by Ed Taylor Construction South and Harrod Properties to participate on the team that has worked so hard to make this project a reality.
